A funny thing happened on the way back from a track day...My M3 and I hit a patch of ice on the road and ended up shiny side down in a ditch. The shoulder belt was loose, but my "CG-Lock"ed lap belt held me tightly in the seat, ass over teakettle. You say the CG-Lock is not a "safety device" but it sure helped to be held securely while I was figuring out how to get out of the car. Thanks!

The insurance company totaled the car. I don't have a picture of the car in it's original resting position because the accident occurred at night on a dark road. It all happened kind of fast, but I estimate the car spun about 90 degrees before sliding off the edge of the road, hitting the embankment and rolling. Speed was not fast, maybe 30 mph? The break in the windshield is from a boulder hit during the roll...

You're welcome to use my e-mail.

Thanks again,
